

New Originality reports feature in Classroom

Colleagues,

Middletown Township Public Schools has been invited to participate in the Google Classroom originality reports beta. This is a unique opportunity for you to pilot a new unreleased feature in Classroom and help shape the development. For more information, see this blog post.

What is Originality Reports in Google Classroom?

Originality reports is a new feature that brings the capabilities of Google search right to your student assignments and grading interface through Google Classroom. The learning tool helps both teachers and students thoroughly review and analyze coursework to make sure it is properly cited and avoid unintentional plagiarism. This feature was designed to help students improve their writing and spot potential issues while saving you time while grading.

Getting Started and FAQs:

- Share this post via Classroom announcements with your students to help them learn more about how to use the tool for their assignments
- Check out instructions for Originality for instructors on the help center
- For additional support reach out to the Classroom Community Forum
- All of this information is also available on our website under the technology section or

Submitting Feedback

Did you know you can send feedback directly to the Google for Education team via the “Send feedback” button within Classroom? Feedback on products in their early stages have big impact on product design. When submitting bugs, feature requests, or user confusions, be sure to start with “Originality Report.” Always include screenshots with feedback.

This feature was designed to help students improve their writing and spot potential issues while saving you time while grading. When an instructor enables originality reports for an assignment, all students will be able to create reports up to 3 times for Google Docs files before they turn them in to spot check and correct potential missed citations.

During the beta, all district users can use originality reports as much as they need.

I hope you find this feature helpful and as always, if you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me.
